"At NC 82962598, situated on the marginal ground of the depopulated township of Ceannabhaid and adjacent to a small burn, there is a burnt mound. It is horseshoe-shaped with a turf and heather covering. It measures 11.5m E-W by 9.5m and 1.0m high, with its open end in the E. A rabbit hole in the top of the mound revealed a content of blackened earth, burnt stone and charcoal. Within the mound and on its sides are several large unburnt stones, some upright and protruding through the turf, others lying on the surface. Three of the upright stones fringe the central hollow forming three corners of a rectangle 2.2m x 1.2m. A single hut (HNC 82 NW 018), lies among the township about 200m uphill from the burnt mound." (OSFI:JB:22.2.1977)
